THE SPIRIT

BEHIND CHOOSING MULTI INDUSTRIES

The multi-business sector serves as the nucleus of economic development. Bangladesh, among the world's most densely populated nations, grapples with a severe scarcity of housing.

Despite the majority of the population falling within middle and low-income brackets, achieving universal housing remains a distant dream. Over the past two decades, the private sector has only partially met the nation's housing demands. The gap between supply and demand looms large.

Despite inadequate policy preparations, entrepreneurial developers have managed to thrive. However, significant portions of the middle and low-income demographic remain underserved. With this demographic forming the majority, the private multi-business sector holds immense potential to expand and address societal needs, fostering affordability and improving quality of life for this segment of the population.
